

Public Advocate

Daniel Squadron (D)

Hi. I'm Daniel Squadron — Democrat for Public Advocate. My story's probably like many of yours: My grandparents came through Ellis Island, working their way out of poverty in the Bronx to give our family opportunities to get an education and make a life in New York. That story — our story — has to live on. I'm running for public advocate to make sure every family has those same opportunities. As a new father, I know how important it is that parents have a voice: Building a city that makes sure children in every neighborhood are safe, fed, and well educated. One reason Senator Chuck Schumer is supporting my campaign? Because I've been able to get results. I wrote a law banning military-style assault weapons, and voted to ban high-capacity gun magazines and require strict background checks for gun purchases. And when it comes to reform, I've always fought for greater accountability. I wrote — and passed — major ethics reforms. And as Public Advocate, I'll have detailed plans to make city government more transparent and accountable. This is a big city. Sometimes it's easy to think you don't have a voice. As Public Advocate — I'll be yours. Please learn more about my record of results and plans for our city at squadron-for-new-york.com. And I ask for your vote on September 10th.
